DANGERS OF CRAZING

Some tiles are more prone to crazing than others, particularly high gloss artisan type tiles with ceramic biscuits. But did you know that how tiles are fitted and what with can also affect crazing? Here are some of the things to look out for that can increase the risk of crazing;

1. Fixing ceramic (i.e. not porcelain) wall tiles with cement based adhesives, particularly rapid set can set up tensions in the bed (shrinkage, and extra strong adhesion). These tensions can be greater than the strength of the tile which can manifest itself in crazing or even cracking.
2. Increasing bed thickness resulting in higher bed shrinkage.
3. Cement based mortars mixed with excessive water causing shrinkage.
4. Insufficient provision for movement in wall tiling, in particular internal corners of showers being butted together with no room for a suitable silicone movement joint.
5. Timber framed homes or stud work can move considerably after installation which can result in tension within the tiles.

So, if you are fitting ceramic tiles consider using a standard set cement based adhesive or a good quality ready mix (subject to manufacturers tile size limitations). Add the correct volume of water to any mix and avoid thick beds. Make sure you leave expansion joints, particularly on internal corners and beware of stud work or timber framed houses that have allowed timbers to get wet.

FAST FIXING FOR PORCELAIN & STONE

Norcros Rapid Porcelain & Stone is a white cement-based tile adhesive designed for fixing porcelain, ceramic and natural stone tiles. It can be used internally and externally with a setting time of 3 hours at 20°C for quick installation. Plus there's no need to use an admixture as the adhesive contains unique Rock-Tite polymeric binders for enhanced flexibility.

- ✓ Flexible
- ✓ Internal & external
- ✓ Non-slip
- ✓ High adhesion strength
- ✓ Suitable for ceramic, porcelain & natural stone
- ✓ Conforms to BS EN 12004 C2F
